Judgement, 2019

Colored pencil on paper

ART 500

"This set of three drawings depicts how we shouldn't judge others so easily, when we don't understand their personal struggles. The drawings on the left and the right are reacting to the person in the middle, who is sliding apart. However, each face has its own strange aspects. The one on the left is cracking and the one on the right is pixelating away. These represent how everyone has their own individual issues, so it is hypocritical to criticize the one in the middle for breaking apart. Instead, we should aim to understand and empathize with each other."
